The Elks Home on Ninth street, between Main and Virginia, was destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning. The fire originated at 1:40 o'clock in the second story of the club rooms in the rear. E. J. Duncan, superintendent of the club rooms, left at 11:30 and everything was in good order. Mr. Duncan had taken charge of the building only about a month ago, investing something like $700 in the business and this is a total loss, as he carried no insurance.

The Home was a two-story brick building fronting 45 feet on the south side of Ninth street, extending back 110 feet, with alleys on the west and south sides. Adjoining it on the east was J. H. Skarry's jewelry store, which was saved with little or no damage.

The fire department responded promptly and did excellent work, throwing four streams upon the fire from the roofs of adjacent buildings and soon had it under control. The rear half of the building was a sun parlor used as the dining room and pool room. The walls of this were mostly glass windows, with the wooden framework covered with concrete. These walls are still standing but will of course have to be taken down.

The front wall is apparently uninjured and the west wall is still standing, but a part of it may have to be rebuilt.

The confectionery, restaurant and ice cream factory of W. A. Davis was in the store room on the west side of the building and Mr. Davis' stock is a total loss. His loss is perhaps $3,000, with $1,700 insurance.

The barber shop of Ficken & Adkins was in the store room on the east side and this was entirely wrecked, as the floor above fell in on it. Their loss is about $1,000, with $800 insurance.

The Elks Home building was remodeled and enlarged last year at a cost of $3,500 for the improvements and it was valued at $15,000 to $20,000. A cash offer of $12,500 was refused for it a year ago, before the building was remodeled.

The memorial tablet on the west wall of the Lodge room, at first appeared to be in good condition, but it is practically ruined, being discolored and otherwise disfigured. It was presented to the lodge a year or two ago by Dr. Frank H. Bassett. The Elks Lodge, which owns the Home, owes about $7,500 on the property and its only real asset towards rebuilding is the lot, which is worth $10,000 as it stands.

The Lodge has about 280 members and before the fire quit burning a movement was started to rebuild on a better and grander scale.

The trustees are T. J. Tate, E. J. Duncan and Sam Frankel. Exalted Ruler C. R. Clark at once called a meeting for last night, which was held in the Odd Fellows' lodge room, and the plan to restore the building was put on foot with an enthusiasm that will brook no failure.

The Home will be reopened as soon as possible in some temporary quarters.

W. A. Davis is arranging for a location for his ice cream factory, but has not decided to reopen the restaurant for the present, but will do so when he can get his old stand. Ficken & Adkins, the barbers, have already resumed in a new stand.

Small Blaze Thursday.

About 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon the fire department was called to the residence of Mr. H. C. Richards, on South Main. The dwelling is supposed to have caught from a spark falling on the roof of the building. It required quick work to quench the flames which had gained considerable headway. The damage by fire and water probably amounts to $100.

The National Magazine For April.

A host of theatre-going readers will have an irresistible desire to pick up the April National Magazine for the second installment of William Hodge's notable serial, "The Guest of Honor." Mr. Hodge's popularity as an author bids fair to increase the million admirers who saw his incomparable acting in "The Man from Home."

A remarkable article entitled
"The President of America," by Mitchell Mannering, is illustrated with portraits of all the American Presidents, contains salient sketches of all the Republics of North, Central and South America. The author has covered the countries of a hemisphere in a most exhaustive way, and the article responds to the growing sentiment which looks toward South America for trade development. The National is to be congratulated for its energetic effort to make all the American Republics better known to the American people.

The Editor of The National, who attended the coronation of King Edward the Seventh, has just returned from Europe, where he made a study of the legislative bodies of England, France, Germany, Switzerland and Holland. The readers are promised a colloquial flashlight of his observations abroad, for when Joe Chapple starts to describe what he has seen and heard, the picture is always originally vivid.

AMUSEMENTS

When "The Golden Girl" was originally produced in Mort H. Singer's theatre in Chicago, where it ran for over three hundred and fifty consecutive performances, Burns Mantle, the conservative and efficient dramatic critic gave the following opinion:

"The new play 'The Golden Girl' seems to be the best in all its parts of anything yet produced at Mort H. Singer's Chicago theatre. The play jumps from gay quips to passive jest with the agility of a mountain goat. The score contains big song hits."

When such a man as Burns Mantle speaks in such commendation of "The Golden Girl" it proves that Mort H. Singer's brilliant and dazzling musical comedy is more than worth while. The original production will be seen at Holland's Opera House next Monday night, April 3, with Leona Watson as the star supported by a specially selected cast of players.

Dumb Chills and Fever.

Douglasville, Tex.—"Five years ago I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Miss Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time was taken with dumb chills and fevers, and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four different doctors, but got no relief, so I began to take Cardui.
Now I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. As a tonic there is nothing in a drug store like it. As a remedy for women's ills, it has no equal. Try it. Price

Improved
Hickory King Corn

My attention was first called to Hickory King
Corn twelve or fifteen years ago.

It was claimed to produce more corn, NOT COBS
AND STALKS, especially on thin land, than any other variety. I had been planting the different varieties grown in this section, Middle Tennessee and North of Ohio River. Each had its serious defects, too much cob, too long maturing or too chaffy, and each had too many nubbins, or ears not filled out. I did not like especially the first crop of Hickory King Corn I raised. The ears were most too small, and not enough stalk.

The next year I crossed it with Huffman, giving it more stalk and longer ears, and still retaining the large, deep grains with a slightly larger cob. Since then I have not planted any other corn on the farm, and have done all I could to prevent its mixing with my neighbor's corn, many of whom plant this variety.

In a test made at the Iowa Experimental College some years ago this corn shelled out most pounds of corn per bushel out of thirty varieties. On account of the small cob, this corn did not sour in the shock in the fall of 1906 during the wet harvest, so there was no trouble about the seed for the 1907 crop, while with almost all other varieties the case was just reversed. I had no trouble getting a stand of 97 per cent. without testing seed. Samples of several varieties of corn were sent to the Agricultural Department to be tested. The report showed Hickory King to be one of the most satisfactory they had tested.

Comment by Prof. C. A. Moores, of the University of Tennessee, after a few years' test with "Boone County White," "Iowa Silver Mine" and fourteen others. (See Bulletin No. 89; July 1910, Page 51.)

"Hickory King is said to have originated in Virginia. At any rate, it is extensively grown in certain counties of that State, and its use is rapidly spreading throughout Tennessee. The ears are small and very thoroughly protected by husks and more than one ear is frequently produced on the stalk. The grains are so large and flat that when once seen they are likely to be remembered. No other variety grown at this Station equals this one in the high percentage of shelled corn—70 pounds of ear corn as grown under average field conditions running with 61 to 63 pounds of shelled corn. None of the other varieties surpass it in soundness, and no other has proven its equal as a grain producer on either poor or medium upland, and its capacity to give high yields even on rich land has been demonstrated more than once.
For example, a block of 16 1/4-acre plots planted at the rate of 10,000 stalks per acre on fertile bottom land at the Station farm averaged in 1909 nearly 90 bushels of shelled corn to the acre. The chief objections urged against it are the hardness of grain and the difficulty with which it is husked. Selection and breeding may overcome these defects as well as increase the yield. Also selections are suggested both for a one-eared variety for grain and for a prolific strain for silage, for which purpose on poor uplands it is even now well suited. Failure to plant thick enough is not an uncommon cause of unsatisfactory yield, especially if ranker-growing and large-eared varieties, which require wide spacing have so to speak, established the rate of planting."

The most prominent seed corn catalogs in the country advertise Hickory King Corn, and price it as high as any variety except their leaders, for which they claim "The earth and the fullness thereof." Note the description taken from two of the most prominent seedsmen. One out West says: "A white variety of field corn which has the smallest cob of any in existence, of vigorous habits and a splendid and sure cropper, especially well suited to light and thin soil. A very desirable variety and largely planted in many Southern States. It does well in all Northern and Central Western States."

This seems to cover nearly all the corn section.
Another local catalogue says. "The ears are rather small, but usually two or three on each stalk.
It is a good yielder. The cobs are small, a single grain sometimes being large enough to cover across section of cob. The grains are very large, flinty, and of the finest quality for milling or feeding."

What else do we want with it? This corn is particularly good for early crops and will give satisfactory results.

These are correct descriptions of the corn. It does not mature so early as some of those Northern and Western "leaders," and hence is not so light and husky. It matures earlier than the old Willis, the most widely known corn here, and will produce more and better corn. I know no corn so easy to get a stand of. Ears that have been on the ground all winter will usually germinate satisfactorily. It will stand more exposure than will "Willis" and is as satisfactory for meal and feed as any corn grown anywhere. The one objection to it is, it shells too easily.

I can furnish this Improved Hickory King Corn, such as I plant, at $2.00 per bushel.

Hopkinsville has a prominent citizen whose name is Thomas Thomas and used to have one named James James.

Has Located Here.

The celebrated Hindoo Seer has arrived in Hopkinsville and has opened office at No. 513, cor., Second and Liberty streets. He is master of the oriental treatment and natural healing and is said to be the greatest expert Palmist in the world.

Escaped Convict Seen.

Newport, Ky., March 31.—It was learned here Tuesday that Frank Sayman, the pugilist convict who escaped from the penitentiary at Frankfort, passed through Bellevue en route to Cincinnati. It is supposed that he will leave there this afternoon for Colorado.

Verdict For Damages.

John Moran was awarded $4,000 damages against the L. & N. railroad in circuit court in Warren. Moran was fireman on the engine of a train which plunged through the bridge into the Cumberland river at Clarksville one night in September, 1907. He was thrown against the main pier, sustaining serious injuries.

Of Course Not.

"Don't lie in bed while your mother cooks the breakfast," says B. Fairfax, in her "Don'ts for girls." Of course not girls. Don't think of such a thing. Sit up in an arm chair, and read "The Rosary," and give mother a chance to make the bed while the biscuits are browning. Henderson Journal.

Back to Infirmary.

Booker's Mistake.

After Booker Washington got into that strange apartment house in New York, hunting, as he alleges, for the residence of a friend, if he had simply asked the first person he met for further directions, as any ordinary sensible person would have done, instead of presuming upon his dignity and personality, he would have saved himself a world of notoriety and also a sore head.—Hartford Herald.

ROBERT A. COOK SUCCEEDS BALL

Named as Assistant Secretary of State by Dr. Ben L. Bruner.

Frankfort, Ky., March 31.—Robert A. Cook, of Hopkinsville, employed in the Auditor's office, yesterday was appointed Assistant Secretary of State to succeed W. Sherman Ball, who resigns, effective April 1, to become postmaster at Hardinsburg. Mr. Cook is well known and liked in Frankfort, and came to this city with the present administration just after Frank P. James went in as Auditor. Mr. Cook will familiarize himself with the duties of the new office and then will begin work April 1.

PAYNTER IS IN

Hilda's Resurrected Angel

"You look just like Hilda's angel, but don't you tell her I said so," warned the child as she scrutinized the new guest at St. Francis Hotel in the Cumberland. She lives over yonder." Graham Elliot turned and looked in the direction indicated by the child and saw a small stone lodge. Vines whose leaves were beginning to color early as they do in the mountains clambered over the railing on the porch. A collier sat upright on the top step in the sunshine.

Elliot put his hand over his mouth and gave a sharp whistle. Muffled as it was, the collier heard and spring erect harking, looking eagerly along the road. The door of the lodge opened and a woman appeared.

"Hold me up quick so Hilda can see!"

Elliot picked the child up and held her so that his own face was shielded. "She didn't even see me," said the child wistfully as the lodge door closed. "She never looked over here."

"And what is Hilda's angel, little girl?"

"You look like him," said Dorothy, gravely. "Don't call me little girl. I'm Dorothy Fairfax Fielding. We're spending the summer here 'cause mother has the hay fever."

"Well, Dorothy Fairfax Fielding, you haven't told me about the angel."

"You look an awful lot like him. Hilda keeps his picture on her desk with some flowers in a little bowl right before it all the time. He looks as if he's smiling at you over the flowers."

"What is Hilda's other name?"

"Just Hilda. Mr. McReynolds says the name just suits her. He is the man who writes books and loves Hilda."

"Let's go see Hilda. Maybe you'll love her too."

"No, thank you, Dorothy. I had a good angel once and I loved her and lost her so I don't want to love any more."

"Mother," called the child, suddenly spying a graceful figure in the doorway. "Some here! Isn't he like Hilda's angel?"

Laughingly, Mrs. Fielding approached and assisted by the newcomer himself, Dorothy proceeded to introduce them.

"Hilda is the one passion of my small daughter's heart, so if you would keep in her good graces, you must at least pretend to be a devotee at the shrine of wisdom and beauty on the mountain."

"You must meet our goddess, at any rate, Mr. Elliot. She is a rare woman, one in a thousand, and that is saying a great deal, considering that I am a woman, too. She is giving a tea this afternoon at 4. I'll see that you are asked."

"Come on and go with me down the mountain, Mr. Elliot," begged Dorothy. "I gather fresh flowers for Hilda's angel every day."

The tea was a great success. All the hotel guests were there and the hostess, in her soft gray gown, moved among her guests dispensing hospitality with a grace and charm that added fresh laurels to her social brow. When the last guest had gone, Hilda sat down in a great arm chair before the blazing hickory logs. There was a familiar tap and then Dorothy opened the door.

"I've brought company, Hilda."

"Doesn't he look like your angel? Here are the flowers for your picture. We went after them early this afternoon, but we got lost, really, truly lost, Hilda."

The man's hand met hers in a firm warm clasp that sent the blood to her throat and brow. She felt that she could not speak; something was choking her.

"I want to see your angel, please. Dorothy says we are very much alike."

Silently she led him to the little desk, took the flowers from the low bowl and replaced them with Dorothy's fresh mountain blossoms.

"There is a striking resemblance," she said smiling a little as she turned the picture so that he might see the face in the glow of the fire.

"Hilda, can it be true? Is it possible? And they say you are writing stories for children! For children, Hilda! Is it true? Awakened love, possible love, had set his blood afire."

"It's all true," she answered quietly. "But you left me because you said you were not a domestic woman, that you didn't want a home life and—"

"I didn't know," she interposed quickly. "I wanted you to be an artist, to write poetry, to rave over pink sunsets and lonely pine trees. I didn't know. Oh, I didn't know."

"And who taught you?"

"Dorothy," she said broken. "Tis an old story of a little child leading them."

He held out strong, inviting arms and she walked straight into the shelter of them.

Reminiscences.

"There are no pirates now to make you walk the plank."

"No. But a few got me last summer on the board walk at a seaside resort."

Unreliable Assertions.

"What makes you think your publisher is unscrupulous?"

"The things he says about me and my books in his advertisements," replied the author.

FIXING THINGS

"Really, I'm sorry," Harold told his sister. "I would if I could, but I can't."

"Who is the girl?" asked Marjory. "If you must know, it's Dorothy," responded Harold.

"Then he a dear and call her up. Tell her that your own and only sister entertains the Noyes-Bryce bridal party on Saturday evening. You, being the best man, are indispensable. She won't mind changing her engagement with you for another evening. If you are not here who will move the bridge tables? Who will take the groom's uninteresting sister in to supper? Who will pass the cigars? Who will do everything? Without you the whole affair will be one dismal failure."

"I hate to refuse you quite as much as I dislike missing the party. But listen to my thrilling story."

"Four weeks ago next Saturday," related Harold, "Dorothy and I had a theater engagement. You know, mother's uncle died on that evening. I had to act as chief funeral director, so I was compelled to break my engagement with Dorothy. We decided to go on the following Wednesday."

"On that evening my boss came on from New York. He wanted to discuss with me matters of importance. He was to return to New York the next day. Could I say to him, 'Tonight I take the sweetest girl on earth to the theater, so I can't talk business'? I could not. It was up to me again to break our engagement. The following Wednesday was amicably settled upon for a real celebration, for Dorothy is the most obliging girl in the world."

"That Wednesday was the first day I had my new auto. You recollect that I was arrested for scorching. I had to hang around the police station until it was too late to appear in respectable society. Poor Dorothy sat waiting for me for hours. We made another appointment for next Saturday. Now, do you insist that I again disappoint the best of all girls?"

"It does seem dreadful," sighed Marjory.

"Why not change your party to another evening?" suggested her brother. "Utterly out of the question," answered Marjory. "I couldn't change the date for my own mother-in-law, if I were married. Don't ask me to do anything so hopelessly impossible."

The next evening brother and sister came to the dinner table with beaming faces.

"I have asked seven girls and seven men to break fourteen engagements so my big brother could be present at my party," announced Marjory.

"You are an angel," said Harold. "On what night is the famous Noyes-Bryce bridal party going to take place?"

"Next Thursday evening, dear," Marjory answered, sweetly.

"Next Thursday evening? You don't mean it! It's all a joke! Speak, Marjory! Tell me it's not to be Thursday evening," roared Harold.

"What is the matter with Thursday evening?" asked his surprised sister. "Everything," declared Harold. "I thought I had acted selfish about that blasted affair of yours, so I decided to do my painful duty. I closed my desk at two o'clock, took a taxi to Dorothy's and explained the situation to her. That girl has the most irresistible sense of humor. She laughed till the tears rolled down her cheeks. Then she and I decided that if ten of my mother's uncles died, if twenty bosses of mine came from New York, if thirty police courts detained me, and if forty sisters gave forty parties, we would go to the theater next Thursday evening."

"I wish I had Dorothy's irresistible sense of humor for about five minutes," said Marjory. "Let's call her up."

No Complaints, Please.

Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, at the New York Horse Show, was praising American hotels.

"They are stupendous," he said. "There's nothing like them abroad. And as a rule their service is as incomparable as their size and their magnificence."

"Sometimes, though—not often, but sometimes—the American hotel guest is treated more like a boy in a boarding-school than a paying visitor in a hotel. Thus a friend of mine went to the desk in his hotel the other day to lodge a complaint."

"A complaint, eh?" said the clerk. "Well, I guess you'll have to see the boss about that. That's him there."

"My friend turned to the boss, who stood at his elbow, smoking a cigar. 'Are you the proprietor of this hotel?' he began."

"The proprietor took his cigar from his mouth, looked my friend up and down, and drawled:

"Well, I thought I was till you came."

Mixed Peroration.

The preacher had been eloquent in his remarks concerning the young girl over whose remains the funeral services were being held. Tears were in the eyes of all present. Even the speaker's voice trembled with the force of his emotion. He concluded his sermon with this outburst: "Can any one doubt that this fair, fragile flower has been transplanted to the bosom of the Lord?"

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

Hancock-Taylor.

J. V. Hancock and Miss Sallie Taylor, a couple from Trigg, were married at the court house Thursday morning. Judge Knight performed the ceremony.

Many Reasons.

There are many reasons why every teacher in Kentucky should attend the Annual Meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association at Owensboro on June 27, 28 and 29, 1911. For the best composition written by a Kentuckian, containing not fewer than fifty nor more than one hundred words, on the subject: "Why Should Kentucky Teachers Attend the Owensboro Meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association?" I will give the sum of $5.00; for the second best $3.00 and the third best $1.00. The composition must be received by me not later than twelve o'clock, noon, Thursday, April 20, 1911. The Board of Directors of the Association will act as judges. The names of the winners and the compositions will be published. Additional information will be given upon request.

T. W. Vinson, Secretary, Frankfort, Kentucky.

Popular Mechanics Magazine For April.

The supernatural becomes natural to us as soon as we master its laws. A toy elephant recently assisted a government in its operations in a savage country. To the ignorant natives the persons operating the mechanical contrivance were Gods possessed of miraculous power. They did not dream that the gem of the same capabilities lay dormant in themselves. Civilization is a series of brilliant hypotheses, assumptions of relations between the known and the unknown, culminating in tangible discoveries and inventions. No fact, no law of science, so insignificant, but some day, some ready mind may combine it with some other fact or law and flesh upon us a light of understanding surpassing dreams, and revolutionary in its import. This has occurred again and again. The habitual reader of Popular Mechanics Magazine hears the elements seethe and murmur in the crucible of time. In the April number there are 329 articles and 315 illustrations. These articles cover a wide range of subjects, telling things that are being done in the way of development all over the world.

The assessed valuation of property in Owensboro is $7,000,000.

The wind of Wednesday blew down half of the smokestack of the power plant of the City Light Co. It was of iron and fell without doing damage. A new one has been under way for some time and will be done soon. Business will not be interrupted.

FIREPROOF MASS IS FLAME SWEPT

Magnificent $27,000,000 New York State Capitol Damaged.

WAS BUILT IN 1889.

Bills Passed Present Legislature Destroyed—Watchman Missing.

Albany, N. Y., March 31.—Fire-swept, smoke-strewn and water drenched, New York state's magnificent $27,000,000 capitol stands this morning a partial wreck by flames that started in the assembly library, burned away the entire west wing and did damage estimated at $10,000,000 before the flames were declared under control after ranging more than four hours.

It is believed the fire was started by a fused electric push button becoming electrified.

The flames licked up the state library, the court of claims, the assembly library and document rooms most of the offices of the excise department and the quarters of the senate finance committee and water and smoke took up the work that the flames laid down and the damage from this cause extends to every part of the building.

All the bills passed by the present session were destroyed.

NIGHT WATCHMAN MISSING

No trace had yet been found tonight of Samuel J. Abbott, the aged night watchman in the state library. The state carried no insurance, as the capitol building that burned but its contents.

Most precious from the historian's standpoint of the fuel the flames found in their path were the twenty-three manuscript folio volumes of the records of the governors of the city of New Amsterdam, covering a period from 1630 to 1674. These were in course of translation and were burned with the original Dutch documents.

BUILDING COST $27,000,000

The capitol building was begun in March, 1884 and took five and a half years to build. It cost $27,000,000 and was a constant scandal.

State Commissioner of Education Andrew S. Draper said the state library contained 600,000 volumes, 400,000 pamphlets and 300,000 historical manuscripts. Two years ago Commissioner Draper transferred from the state library proper to the safe in his office on the first floor the original emancipation proclamation, the original of Washington's farewell address the original manuscript of the state constitution and fifteen or twenty of the other priceless manuscripts, as well as all the Washington relics.

WEBB GETS SENTENCE

Convicted Without The Testimony Of Eye Witnesses.

KILLED LAURA BROWN

Circuit Court Is Now Wind-ing Up Smaller Cases.

Circuit Court has been hearing the minor commonwealth cases this week and next week equity matters will be taken up.

The trial of Dan Webb, col., charged with the murder of a negro woman at Mannington last August, was concluded Wednesday. A verdict of guilty was returned and Webb will get an indeterminate sentence of from two to 21 years. All of the eye witnesses had disappeared, but a clear case was made out against him.

Two cases of gaming appealed from the city court were settled without trial for a fine of $20 and costs.

The appealed case of Sam Frankel, charged with exceeding the speed limit with his automobile, was tried Thursday and yesterday. It involved a construction of the new state law and its application to cities.

The case was defended by John Stites for Mr. Frankel and City Attorney L. T. Brasher was assisted by Judge T. P. Cook. Arguments were made by the attorneys yesterday morning and the jury after a brief consideration brought in a verdict of $27.50. The original fine was $20 and costs.

The new statute, which superseded the city ordinance, prohibits an automobile from passing a crossing or a public highway where the view is obstructed at a greater rate of speed than 8 miles an hour and if his decision stands it practically limits speed in the city, where there are crossings every 200 or 300 feet, to 8 miles an hour, although the limit is 10 miles in the business section and 15 miles in the residence section of cities, where the provision as to crossings does not complicate matters. It is necessary to maintain a higher speed for a mile to create a violation and Mr. Frankel's defense was that his speed was beyond the limit only a few yards in ascending a grade where streets intersected at 9th and Liberty.

STOLEN WATCH

Recovered By Officer Denton This Week.

Mrs. Joseph Beazley had a gold watch stolen from her residence on East Seventh street the first of the week, while showing some clothing to some negro girls with a view to selling it to them. After their departure she missed the watch, on her loom the original cost of which was $165. Officer Denton was put on the case and finally located one of the girls, who when interrogated said the watch was stolen by Elva Buckner, a child 11 years old, and that it was taken from the child by her teacher in the colored schools, Bessie Moseley.

The officer found the watch with the teacher who restored it and it was returned to the owner in good condition except that the crystal was broken. The child is within the age limit of the juvenile law and if prosecuted will have to be sent to the school of reform.

HOPKINSVILLE GIRL

To Become Bride of a Cabinet Minister.

A Washington special says Postmaster General, Frank B. Hitchcock is soon to be married to Miss Mary Southerland, daughter of Rear Admiral W. H. H. Southerland and a grand daughter of the late Dr. James Rodman, of this city. She was born near this city. Mr. Hitchcock is 44 years old and a bachelor.

CARNIVAL IS SNOWED UNDER

Three Inches of Snow Fell, Discouraging Hopes of Early Spring.

FELL THURSDAY NIGHT.

Weather Clerk Makes Tough Luck and Bad Spell for Baseball Carnival.

The carnival under the auspices of the Baseball club has been playing in hard luck ever since it opened Tuesday. The opening was delayed one day on account of the weather, but the conditions have been very unfavorable all of the week and the fall of three inches of snow yesterday morning was the blow that almost killed it. However, the show people are a cheerful lot and are hoping for a good finish to-day and to-night. Next week they go to Clarksville.

Sample Seed Corn.

Special attention is called to the advertisement of the Improved Hickory King corn which appears in this issue of the Kentuckian and for sale by Mr. Chas. E. Barker, Pembroke. A sample of this seed corn can be seen at the Planters Hardware Co., Incorporated, this city.

April American Magazine.

Under the title of "The Thin Crust of Civilization," Ray Stannard Baker reviews the story of the tragedy which took place last July in Newark, Ohio, where the entire town broke out into lawlessness and lynched a boy, nineteen years old, who was a United States Deputy Marshal attempting to perform his duty. Mr. Baker analyzes the causes which were responsible for this outbreak and fixes the blame on the big breweries and wholesale liquor merchants who abetted the local dealers in breaking the law.

Three other articles in this issue are almost of equal importance; they are an article on The Injustice of Personal Property Taxation by Albert J. Nock; the second article of the series entitled "The Principles of Scientific Theories; and an article by Albert W. Atwood on "The Great Express Monopoly," in which he describes the deal and contract between the United States Express Company and the Government whereby the latter has been obliged to pay unfair and outrageous profits to the former.

TAX IS DEFEATED.

Maine Twelfth State To Vote Against Amendment.

Augusta, Maine, March 3.—The legislature increased to twelve the number of states opposing the federal income tax amendment. Unless some states change their vote the amendment is dead. Those opposing are: Louisiana, Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island, Virginia, Arkansas, New Hampshire, Utah, West Virginia, New Jersey and Maine.

The San Francisco's Worlds Fair.

San Francisco's preparations for the coveted international exhibition in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal are described, with illustrations, in the April number of Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The fair management has not yet selected a site, although a poll taken by one of the San Francisco newspapers indicates that Golden Gate Park, comprising 1,010 acres, and with much adjoining vacant property is preferred by a majority of the people.

MOCK TRIAL LIKE REAL ONE

Alleged Night Rider Works The Usual Alibi Defense.

MOOT COURT THIS TIME

Eloquent Speeches by Able Orators But All to No Purpose.

The much talked of mock trial of W. T. Radford, charged with night riding, was held at the court house Thursday night by the High School boys.

A good crowd was in attendance when Judge Alvin H. Clark called the court to order and directed the sheriff to summon a jury from the bystanders.

The jury was made up of both sexes and all ages, regardless of whether or not the parties were housekeepers. They were asked if they had formed opinions, were members of the band of night riders or related to the defendant. A few challenges were used by the defense, among those challenged being Mrs. J. T. Hanbery, W. H. Jesup, Mrs. W. A. Radford, (mother of the defendant) and Mayor Chas. M. Meacham.

The jury was finally made up as follows: J. T. Walker, L. H. Davis, Jno. B. Chilton, Thomas Smith, J. C. Galbreath, Dr. W. H. Ketchum, William Cate Peter Lacy; Mrs. Barksdale Hamlett, Mrs. N. H. Fentress, Miss Judith Boxley and Miss Edna Cayce.

The prosecution, conducted by Chas. Jarrett, introduced a strong array of witnesses to prove that the defendant, at the head of 15 or 20 night riders on Dec. 21, 1910, at 1 o'clock a. m. went to the home of Joe Gary, south of town, and took him out into the yard and cruelly beat him with thorn bushes. The victim told the harrowing tale; Henry Eager, who was spending the night with him, corroborated his story and Cliff Gary and others saw the night riders returning from the raid and recognized W. T. Radford, Albert Kelly, Calvin Thompson and Christy Smith. The last two named turned State's evidence and gave a full account of the affair, which made the case complete.

The defendant was the first witness for the defense and stated that he was being initiated into a Greek fraternity that night and proved by several witnesses that he was at 1 o'clock being floated in a coffin in the mill pond at Cate's mill. His alibi was supported by all of the witnesses for the defense.

There were several amusing side features; Dr. Gray, (Prof. W. E. Grey) said he was called in to dress Gary's wounds and found severe "lacerations of the cuticle." The victim offered to let the jurors inspect his back, but the court ruled that as there were ladies on the jury this was too delicate a matter.

Radford was hurt in the affair on the side of his head and Dr. Gray testified to meeting him in a buggy with another man and that he had a bandage on his head.

The examination of witnesses was conducted by Chas. Jarrett, Granville Cook and Logan Green for the prosecution and by Herschel Long, Albert Brownell and Lakin Ducker for the defense.

Low Johnson was clerk of the court and Charles Robinson sheriff. The case was argued by Messrs. Jarrett and Long.

The speeches were able, eloquent, vigorous and filled with profound arguments and the trial lasted until a late hour.

The jury brought in a verdict of acquittal, just when it was feared that they would have to be locked up until the following day.

The defendant received the congratulations of his friends and his parents were especially overjoyed at his acquittal.

It rather spoils one's hope of heaven to reflect what a lot of undesirable people seem bent on getting there—and what a lot of nice men seem bent on going the other way.

Have You Visited The New Drug Store?

We wish to express our hearty appreciation of the interest shown in our new store by the citizens of Hopkinsville and vicinity. The callers on our opening day exceeded expectations and we were gratified by the expressions of approval heard in regard to the various features of our equipment.

We shall esteem it an honor to have the store inspected at any time by those who have as yet been unable to call. No need of waiting until something in the drug line is wanted, feel at liberty to drop in any time merely to look over the store and see how perfectly it is equipped.

A Modern Store.

With our mahogany fixtures, our marble and plate glass show-cases, our fine new fountain and other features, the store is of course an unusually handsome one, but it has been planned for convenience as well as looks.

The fine equipment is merely the external aspect of the essential regard for quality that extends to every detail of the store.

We are equipped to wait on trade expeditiously and to give good service as well as good goods at the right price.

Fine Goods---Right Prices.

It is well to bear in mind that everything in the store is absolutely fresh and new. Every effort will be made to keep our stock and service up to the highest possible standard. We wish the store to be known as one where quality prevails and where prompt, courteous service may always be had at reasonable prices.

MR. GAITHER'S DEPARTMENT.

The most important department in every drug store is the prescription one. We have not only provided a rare stock of prescription drugs and modern equipment throughout, but have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Ed. Gaither, who will have personal supervision of this branch of the business. Mr. Gaither, through his long experience in Hopkinsville, is known to nearly everybody in the city and surrounding country.

He will be pleased to have all friends and acquaintances call at any time. Mr. Gaither's knowledge and reputation is such as to commend the service of our prescription department to anyone who has a prescription or recipe to compound.

The New Fountain.

Our fountain is of the very latest design and contains all the improvements that help to serve pure, cold, sparkling soda. An expert dispenser is employed and a very large list of beverages will be served. You can come to our fountain knowing that you will procure the most delicious and wholesome beverages that can be produced.

Exclusive Lines.

We shall handle a variety of exclusive lines of goods, such as imported toilet articles, fine confections, etc., and in every branch of the business will endeavor to furnish just what the community requires.

Come And See Us.

PURIFICATION OF THE OYSTER

Simple Method by Which Even the Worst May Be Made Fit for Consumption.

At a recent meeting of the Academie des Sciences de Paris, a report was presented on some experiments made at Concarneau laboratory with reference to the methods that should be used to prevent accidents caused by contaminated oysters. The author has been able to convince himself that it is possible to render shellfish harmless, even after they have been reared in the most unsanitary of surroundings, by placing them for a fortnight in filtered water before selling them to the public. He states, moreover, that this form of "quarantine" in pure water has no evil effects on the quality of the oysters. If all this be so, there is surely no necessity to run the risk of typhoid fever from oysters polluted by sewage. Possibly some will remember the contamination caused in Dublin several years ago by an epidemic of a fatal type of typhoid fever traced finally to the oysters fattened upon the pollutions from the drains. Even today there are many who justly dread the oyster taken from the best known beds in British waters.—Montreal Herald.

LESSONS DANGER TO AVIATOR

Ingenious Device by Which Altitude May Be Reckoned Almost Infallibly.

An ingenious plan which has been suggested for measuring the altitude of an aeroplane, and which, while it requires the services of an independent operator, demands no other apparatus than an accurate stop watch, is the acoustic method. Writing of it in Cassier's Magazine, Henry Harrison Suplee says: "Any sharp sound, such as a quick whistle, or report which may be differentiated from the noise of the machine itself, will be returned to the ear of the operator in the form of an echo from the surface of the earth. If, therefore, the time elapsing between the sound and the echo be noted, the corresponding distance may be estimated from the known velocity of sound. Taking the velocity of sound at 1,100 feet a second, or a little more than 100 feet for a tenth of a second, and, remembering that it is the double distance, going and returning, which is thus computed, the error of observation would be between 50 and 60 feet for one-tenth of a second."

ENGLISH-GROWN TOBACCO.

Winchcombe St. Peter in Gloucestershire began the cultivation of tobacco in England toward the end of the sixteenth century, and the inhabitants are said to have derived considerable profit from it until the trade was placed under restrictions. An entry in Pepys' Diary on September 19, 1667, concerning the coming of a cousin of his to town proceeds: "She tells me how the life guard, which we thought a little while since was sent down into the country about some insurrection, was sent to Winchcombe to spoil the tobacco there, which it seems the people there do plant contrary to law, and have always done, and still been under force and danger of having it spoiled, as it hath been oftentimes, and yet they will continue to plant it. The place, she says, is a miserable poor place."

SOME APPETITE.

Of sporting offers made by the large eaters of old, that made to Charles Gustavus of Sweden when he was besieging Prague is worthy of recall. A peasant offered for the king's amusement to devour a large hog then and there. General Koenigsmark, so runs the tale, suggested that one with such an appetite ought to be burned as a sorcerer, on which the peasant said to the king: "Sir, if your majesty will make that old gentleman take off his spurs, I will eat him before I begin the pig."

Armory For Bowling Green

Warren county will soon have as modern and pretty little armory as any in the State if the plans of the Fiscal Court, which recovined in this city today after a recess of several days, do not miscarry. A motion was carried authorizing the erection of an armory and annex to the county jail the cost of both, with plumbing and heating for both the armory and jail, not to exceed $7,000, provided the county can make a contract with the State for $200 annual rental for ten years.—News

SHOCK TO THE CONGRESSMAN

Statesman Very Much "Gold Bricked" When He Purchased Souvenirs.

Even statesmen, according to a contributor to the Boston Transcript, sometimes find it a ticklish business to buy souvenirs in a foreign land. Not long ago a party of Americans in Mexico succeeded in buying some of the roughly beaten gold necklaces common among the Tehuana women. A United States congressman, in particular, became the owner of two very handsome chains, which the accommodating natives even allowed to be "tested" by a neighboring jeweler.

At Laredo, Tex., on the homeward journey, the customs officers boarded the train, and every man was compelled to show his purchases made across the border. The assessments came fast and furious, and finally the congressman marched up to the counter with his Tehuana necklaces. The customs clerk glanced at them and laid them aside.

The congressman groaned inwardly; he thought it would take a special assessment to get the chains through, and he did not know whether he would have money enough or not.

Five minutes passed, and the congressman, growing impatient, gently pushed his golden treasures under the nose of the customs officer.

Again they were kindly but firmly shoved to one side. Said the congressman then:

"I have a couple of solid gold chains here on which I wish to pay duty."

"Very well, sir, produce them," said the customs officer. "Those you have been showing me are solid brass."

COULD ANYTHING BE WORSE?

Marie M. was visiting when she saw a neighbor go past. "There goes Mr. W.," she said. "I wouldn't speak to him for anything. He chased us out of his sand-pile and talked awful to us."

"Why, Marie, what did he say?" asked the hostess.

"Oh, I wouldn't dare repeat the things he said. He talked just awful! He scolded us like a mother!"—Success Magazine.

HE CHOSE A GIFT

Her present has been so much admired," said Miss Emerson, dangling a ring from one finger and regarding it affectionately.

"You don't say so!" he replied, looking prodigiously at her. "You don't say so!" he repeated, looking first at the young woman and then on the gift which had proved so acceptable.

"Of course," said Miss Emerson, looking somewhat embarrassed and trying with the silver meshed toy, "of course, you understand that I am not in the habit of accepting such handsome birthday presents from my men friends. It is—that is, my married sister says it is—awfully bad form and oughtn't to be allowed."

Young Jetson frowned. "It's a funny thing—" he began, haughtily. "Yes, indeed, that's just what I told her," interjected Miss Emerson. "I told her that with one's old friends it was quite different—almost like brother and sister, you know."

Jetson's frown deepened. "And, besides," she added, looking at him with an independent tilt of her chin, "I know just as much about it as she does."

"Certainly you do," agreed Jetson.

"I should have been very hurt if you had not been willing to accept a trivial token of esteem from me on your birthday," he went on. "Moreover," he said, crossing one leg comfortably over the other in placid recollection of a past struggle, "I'm no end grateful to you for liking it. You see—well, to tell the truth, I'd heard you express yourself to the effect that a gift was not a gift unless it was personally chosen by the giver 'or the givee.'"

Miss Emerson nodded emphatically. "And," continued young Jetson, "if a fellow sends a girl the usual flowers or candy he doesn't exercise any particular niceties of taste; do you think he does? He simply dives in at the florist's door and tells him to send a dozen long ones to a given address, and then he rushes back to his desk. When he wants to get candy he sends the office boy. That is still worse. And nobody but an imbecile sends books to a girl without knowing her taste."

"I should think," remarked Miss Emerson, raising her eyebrows a fraction of a shade, "that you might be tolerably familiar with mine."

"Oh, certainly," agreed young Jetson, hastily. "I am, indeed; but, you see, on this occasion I wanted to give you something that would prove to you that I had gone to personal trouble in selecting a remembrance."

"Really," said Miss Emerson, growing chillier each moment, "I regret that I was the cause of so much inconvenience. You seem to have been positively agitated in the matter."

"Naturally, I was," he retorted, getting to his feet and regarding her sternly from his superior height, "considering that I never really selected a present for a girl before."

He thrust his hands into his pockets and continued to glare. She bit her lip in a vain effort to repress a smile.

"I was looking for something useful," went on Jetson. "I didn't suppose you would care for a yard of copper neckchain, or an engraved penknife, or a hand painted umbrella."

"Why not an umbrella?" urged one salesman who was wasting time or me. "Umbrellas are always useful."

"My dear sir," I said to him, "I should prefer to hold my own umbrella over this particular young lady. Besides, why buy an umbrella? Every household has a private collection."

"The man sighed. 'Get her a gold pen,' he suggested next."

Miss Emerson glanced up with a very special smile.

"But I told him," went on Jetson, "that she usually borrowed mine. 'Try again,' I said to him."

Jetson coughed gently, and there was a pause. "He was a most discerning fellow, that salesman," he remarked to the top of Miss Emerson's head. "Do you want to know what he said next?"

She nodded. Jetson drew a long breath.

"Young man," said that salesman looking at me over a pair of wobbly nose glasses, 'what you want to give that young lady is a hoop ring with a cut glass dewdrop!'"

There was another silence.

"The impertinent thing!" said Miss Emerson, finally, in a very small voice.

"See here, Jessie," protested young Jetson, sitting down beside her and speaking with determination, "you do that fellow an injustice. He was all right, that man! Er—in fact, I took his advice later. No sidestepping please."

"Ah, it fits better than I dared to hope. Don't bother to take it off. I'll make you a present of the box."

Victory Not Complete.

Bingley had found a $10 bill. "But it's not yours, Cyrus," said his wife; "you're not tempted to keep it and say nothing about it, are you?"

"I was at first, but I overcame the temptation."

"Then you advertised it?"

"Sure," rejoined Bingley, with some irritation; "I'm trying to find the owner, all right, Jane, but I'm hoping I shan't."

One Widow's Mistake

Once a week for six months Mr. Charles Ford had driven over to Gorse Lake from Pentville to call at the residence of the Widow Bush. That made 21 times. On the 25th he declared his love and asked for her hand. He was crushed to earth when told that the widow's heart was not in the affair. There were reasons—many reasons—why she could not love. As a brother, he might continue to drive over from Pentville as long as he wished, but any future conversation must not touch upon the subject of love.

Late one afternoon, a week after the great refusal, the Widow Bush set out in her auto to go to Pentville. It was not to see Mr. Ford and hint to him that she had changed her mind, but to visit a relative. At the same hour Mr. Ford set out from Pentville to motor over to Gorse Lake. It was not to submit a new matrimonial proposal, but to see a man on business. Both motors could have made the trip before dusk came down but for accidents. Something went wrong with both machines. Something had to be tinkered at. There was delay. And thus it happened that an hour after dark on a moonless night, with rain threatening at any minute, the two autos came together on that long hill. It is impossible to tell how things happen. In this case both machines had their lamps lit—both were running slowly and carefully—Mr. Ford was prudent and the widow's man experienced, and yet those autos struck head on. There was a jar, but no one was hurt. It would be some hours before the Widow Bush could reach Pentville, or Mr. Ford could talk business with that man in Gorse Lake. Three of the four lamps were smashed. The chauffeur took the fourth and started off to find a farmer to come with a team of horses.

And then it began to rain, and the darkness thickened until Mr. Ford could not see the tip of his nose. The widow had the shelter of a tonneau; he had none. He had to stand out and take the pour as it came.

After the chauffeur had departed there was silence between the reflector and the rejected. It didn't last long, however. At the end of 10 minutes the widow opened the door and called out:

"Mr. Ford, I am sorry that you are out in the rain."

"You ought to be. It is all owing to that fool-man of yours!"

"Mr. Ford, are we in danger of hears?"

"Yes, we are, and I hope ten or twelve of them will come!"

"Mr. Ford, are you smoking?"

"Yes."

"What's that noise?"

"It sounds like the bellowing of a bull."

"But will the animal come here and attack us?"

"He may."

It was a bull, and he had leaped the pasture fence. He came along down the hill, bellowing at every stride and hoping to find something to demolish, and the widow began to scream and threw the door open to jump out.

"Get back there and stop your noise!" commanded Mr. Ford, and his grasp was not gentle as he seized her arm.

Then he disappeared into the night. There were stones in the road. He felt them under his feet and pelted the bull and started him into a retreat. As he came sloshing back through the mud and water the widow asked:

"Mr. Ford, don't you think you ought to follow William and ascertain the cause of this delay?"

"No, ma'am, I don't!" he promptly answered.

"Then I will follow him myself!"

"Then you will stay right where you are! If William isn't the biggest fool in the state he has crawled under a haystack somewhere and won't be seen until daylight."

That settled things for a long half hour. Then the tonneau door opened and a soft voice said:

"Mr. Ford, please come nearer. You loved me, didn't you?"

"Yes," he sulkily admitted.

"You asked me to marry you, and I refused. I refused because I had not read you aright. I am willing to admit that I was entirely mistaken in your character."

"How?"

"I took you for a sissy, like my late husband—awfully good, but a sissy. I didn't know that you were aggressive. I didn't believe you'd dare face a bellowing bull, even by daylight, with a six-rail fence between you. I couldn't have been made to believe that you would dare order me about. Tonight you have shown me my errors. Oh, how mistaken I have been!"

"Then why don't you say you are coming in here beside me and order me to move along? It seems to me we ought to have a talk—a new talk."

And soon after daylight, when the chauffeur returned with a farmer and a team, he saw the widow's sleepy head resting on Mr. Ford's shoulder and lost his presence of mind and stepped back to exclaim:

"Well, but who'd a-thought it!"

A Great Admirer.

"Have you Thackeray's works?"

"No," sighed Mrs. Timpers; "although I am a great admirer of Thackeray."

"Indeed?"

"Yes; and I was so anxious to have his works complete, but I couldn't find a binding that would harmonize with the color scheme in our library."

REV. YEWELL WILL RETURN

Will Begin a Series of Revival Meetings April 9, at Christian Church.

HERE ONCE BEFORE.

Outline of The Opening Day, When Four Services Will Be Held.

Evangelist Herbert Yewell is expected to arrive here a week from today. He will begin his second series of special services in this place Sunday, April 9, will speak to the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., preach at 10:45 a. m., lecture to men at 3 p. m. and preach again at 7:30 p. m. on this first day of the meetings. All the services except the men's mass meeting will occur at the Ninth Street Christian church. The men's meeting will be held at the Tabernacle. The topic of the lecture which Mr. Yewell will give at this meeting is "Was Your Grandmother a Monkey?"

Mr. Yewell will be remembered here as the leader of the excellent meetings of two years ago this spring held in the Ninth Street Christian church. It is a tribute to his power and popularity as an Evangelist that he should be called again for such service by the same church, especially by such a conservative and discriminating congregation.

Since Mr. Yewell's former visit here he has been busy with his work of recruiting and confirming the faith of the church in many widely separated communities. He is now engaged in eminently successful work in Ohio.

Our people will hear him again with delight. Few men who have visited us have rivalled Mr. Yewell's enthusiasm and skill as a speaker to the popular heart. He has also that degree of general culture which makes him most acceptable in all his ministry to the person of taste and education. He is quite remarkable for two personal advantages. He has a voice as sweet as a lute and as powerful as a great organ, and his personality is one of rare magnetism.

Mr. Yewell will be accompanied by Mrs. Yewell, as he was on the occasion of his first visit here. Many of the people of the church remember her with pleasure and will welcome her return with her distinguished husband.

Most men's love-making nowadays is of that vague, indefinite, "impressionistic" school, which keeps you guessing as to what he really means.

ANOTHER SUIT

Against T. C. Road as Result Of Wreck.

A dispatch from Clarksville to Nashville Tenn. seaman and American says:

"Suit has been filed in the Montgomery county circuit court against the Tennessee Central Railroad by Chas. Morris, administrator of Miss Fannie Morris' estate, for $25,000 damages, for the girl's death, caused by the wreck on the T. C. at Adairville switch five weeks ago.

As will be remembered, Miss Morris was a passenger on the train, en route from her home near Dawson Springs to this place to visit relatives and meet her father whom she had never seen. When within sight of the place she expected to visit, the train was wrecked and her body was cremated in the fire that followed."

AMUSEMENTS

On Monday night, April 3, at Holland's Opera House, "The Golden Girl" will be the offering with Miss Leona Watson in the title role under the management of Mort H. Singer. Mr. Singer last season searched the records for some one suitable to play "The Golden Girl" in the play of that name, but had given up in despair when he was urged by his brother to witness a performance of "The Climax," then playing in Chicago. After witnessing the performance Mr. Singer immediately entered into negotiations with Miss Leona Watson, who was playing in "The Climax" the character of the girl who loses her voice. He immediately signed her to binding contracts for three years' duration and she will be seen this season in "The Golden Girl."

The Magazines For April.

As if by telepathic influence the magazines for April are teeming with articles upon mental suggestion, occultism and palmistry. The brains of two hemispheres are concentrated upon the wonderful possibilities of the science of life. The Hindustani one of the oldest races in the world, have developed every jot and tittle of knowledge in this wonderful science. Business men, educators and statesmen no longer blunder into the future gambling with luck. They consult the Hindoo Seer who can tell them what is in store for them. ### Gain of 37 Per cent.

Population statistics of the thirteenth census, announced Thursday, gave Madisonville a population of 4,906. This is a gain of 1,338 over the census of 1900, which gave the city a population of 3,568.

Will Probated.

The will of the late Mrs. Harriet F. Clark was probated Thursday. The following bequests were made:

To Mrs. Lela Long, daughter of deceased, $1,000 in money and all household furniture; to Mrs. Ella Whitehead, a niece, $500; the balance of the estate to be divided equally between Stanley Long, Mrs. Harriet Cook and Gabe Long, grandchildren. In a codicil Mrs. Ione Brame, a niece, is given $100, another codicil provides that Stanley Long is to be charged with $600 as the value of a lot on Walnut street, conveyed to him by deed of gift, and still another codicil provides that Gabe Long is to receive $1,000 more than his brother, Stanley, and sister, Mrs. Cook.

The will was dated July 1, 1902. Stanley Long is named as executor.

Half the world thanks heaven that its better half doesn't know how it amuses itself.

HAREM SKIRT

Worn by "Golden Girl" Actress Stirs up Evansville.

Miss Irene Moulton, a chorus girl with "The Golden Girl," which shows here April 3, created a big sensation by appearing on the street in Evansville wearing a harem skirt.

The havoc wrought in the path of the skirt was grievous and disconcerting. One man at the E. & T. H. station was so excited that he missed his train. The proprietor of the station lunch counter was so amazed that he allowed patrons to get away without paying their bills. A restaurant entered by the skirt was stormed by a curious crowd and firemen from No. 1 hose house aided in restoring order.

WEARER PRAISES THE SKIRT. "Hobbles may come and go but it's the harem skirt for mine every time. Believe me, as long as the country will allow me to wear the harem skirt I will do so."

Thus laughed pretty Irene Moulton, one of the beauties in the chorus of The Golden Girl booked Saturday and Sunday for the Wells Bijou, whose fanciful figure it was that blossomed out in a harem skirt yesterday.

"Really there is nothing like the harem skirt. Nothing to bother you on a windy day or in crossing muddy streets. Why, a woman can dress as quick as a man. Why more women are not wearing them I do not know. If they were, it's a cinch the poor husbands who have to wait for hours while their wives were buttoning the ordinary skirt would save lots of time."

The pantaloon skirt worn by Miss Moulton is of gray flannel with black trimmings. It closely resembles the appearance of the confederate uniform of the civil war which is keeping with the nature of the p in which Miss Moulton figures, "The Golden Girl."

When a Dead Whale Sinks

It happens on rare occasions that a dying whale, "sounding" deer fails to rise again to the surface, remains in the sea-depths after death. The "fish" is not lost, however. From some unexplained cause gases set free by decomposition side the carcass find their way to whale's tongue. This organ becomes inflated, resembling a huge ball and by its buoyancy brings the body of the dead whale to the surface when it is picked up by the crew. The process of inflation and floating commences within a few hours death, and the lapse of two or three days will generally suffice to bring the body of a "lost" whale up from the sea-floor.—From the Ma Wide World Magazine.
